This report will discuss how this effect was SGI Power Challenge and in the ConvexExemplar approached, how the results were, and the reasons for those results. 2. The Architecture of the SGI Power Challenge Before we can discuss the results of this effort, it is helpful to have a short introduction to the architecture involved. The SGI PowerC challenge and the thought of the prototypical RISC-based cache-coherent memory SMP. As such, it will be discussed first. From the hardware perspective, it has the following properties: (1) Powerful RISC-based processors. In this case, RISC processors are at 300 MFLOPS each. (2) This version of the PowerC challenge had up to 18 processors and up to 16 GB of memory, although no more than 16 processors and 16 GB of memory. (3) Each processor has a large off-chip cache (4 MB). (4) Hardware protocols maintain the coherency between all of the caches and main memory. This is a key requirement for shared memory systems to be implemented entirely in hardware. (5) Shared memory is entirely implemented in hardware. All of the boards are connected by a common system bus that implements a snoopy bus protocol for cache coherency. This bus gives a speed of the bus is a key limiting factor in uniform memory access time, determining how many processors can run in a system at one time without running out of memory bus bandwidth.
