This plant is a native of Italy, and other parts of the south of Europe, where it is found growing wild in great abundance, flowering in June and July. It was first cultivated in England by the celebrated Gerard in the year 1596, and is now constantly propagated by the florists through the different parts of that country. It has also been found in some sections of the United States, but not in sufficient quantities to supply the demands of the druggists. In the year 1840, while travelling in the northwestern district of New-York, I found this species of the Iris quite...
